FINANCIAL REPORT
Dear Friends,

the last year, besides being one of changes, challenges and crises, was a year of carrying on. Much of PIN’s work can not be measured in terms of months, but years. To achieve the desired results, not only in terms of quality, takes time. Nevertheless, allow me to draw your attention to several areas of our work. The earthquake in Haiti hit an already poor country at the beginning of the year. The combination of a devastating catastrophe, nearly a quarter of a million victims and a dysfunctional government imposed exceptionally demanding conditions and circumstances upon all humanitarian organisations including us. The massive floods in Pakistan deprived up to twenty million people of shelter across a vast area in the summer. We have been intensively working in both countries ever since.

Social Integration Programs (SIPs) work domestically to significantly enhance the educational environment for marginalized groups to improve their chances for a better life. For example, PIN introduced a pilot project of pre-school preparation courses and Mothers’ Clubs. The number of locations where we are working with social excluded people has grown, along with the number of clients. The nearly 200 social workers and coordinators in the SIPs are the biggest providers of assistance for these individuals, who already suffer from social exclusion and isolation.

The well established One World in Schools program supports the education of teenage students through film, opening themes which might be deemed uninteresting even for teenagers at first sight. The goal is also to support initiatives of young people. Last year’s students’ elections which were organised by the program were in this regard inspirational for a number of them.

The One World film festival – one of the highlights of the year for tens of thousands of viewers – continued with another year in Prague and thirty towns around the Czech Republic as well as in a number of countries of Central and Eastern Europe.

At the same time, our Variants department, Development education and Migration informations programs brought publications, courses, exhibitions, events and special materials for professionals, media and public in the Czech Republic.

The Centre for Human Rights and Democracy continues its work in countries ruled by harsh dictators. In Burma, the generals took off their uniforms, but nothing changed. In Belarus, the erratic leader Lukashenko started jailing the political opposition again. PIN also continued working in Cuba, Transnistria and other places, where people are not free.

Thanks to you, your trust and hundreds of staff members, as well as volunteers, thanks to support of a number of companies, institutions and both private and public donors, we have managed to carry on our work and meet the mission for which People in Need was established – that is to help those in need.

Sincerely

RELIEF AND DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT
In 2010, the humanitarian and development section dealt with two natural disasters. In January, Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, was struck by a devastating earthquake, which not only claimed 200,000 victims, but also destroyed the capital city and left millions of people homeless. At the end of July, one of the largest floods ever swept away millions of homes in Pakistan. It also destroyed fields, representing a major source of livelihood for many Pakistanis. Despite the very complicated security situations in Haiti and Pakistan, PIN managed to set up humanitarian missions in both countries and delivered aid worth almost 2 million EUR by the end of the year.

Other major challenges included the return of hundreds of thousands internally displaced people in Sri Lanka, a devastating drought in Ethiopia and the increasingly worsening security situation in Afghanistan.

Besides responding to natural disasters and armed conflicts in Tibet, Mongolia, Kyrgyzstan, Sumatra, Burma, Montenegro, and the Czech Republic, PIN also supported quality education and built schools, helped tens of thousands of people obtain access to safe water, made efforts to improve social services and care for mothers and children, helped poor people to improve their livelihoods and supported various local institutions and civil society organizations, to strengthen their capacities.

In 2010, People in Need began newly working in Mongolia, Kosovo and Moldova. Our organization’s work abroad would not have been possible without extensive support from the European Commission, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Czech Republic, the Czech Development Agency and many others.

Thanks to its membership in an increased active association of seven like-minded European NGOs, Alliance2015, PIN has been able to respond better and faster to humanitarian disasters. PIN’s work would not have been possible without contributions from members of PIN’s Club of Friends and those who have responded to our appeals. Everyone who has been supporting our work abroad deserves thanks from us and our beneficiaries.

Investment in education is a basic precondition for the development of the individual and society. Without educated individuals, developing countries have no chance of extricating themselves from poverty. In the world, however, there are still almost one billion people who cannot read and write, and more than 100 million children have no access to basic education.

A large majority of developing countries have to contend with a lack of potable water. Thus poor-quality water causes many illnesses and epidemics, which plague entire areas.

The involvement of the population in processes influencing events in their countries is crucial for the stabilization of development. Supporting independent media and non-governmental organizations is important, but so is developing the capacities of local state authorities.

Millions of people in developing countries die of diseases that could be prevented and treated. Help lies in the construction of hospitals, the supply of medicines, training of staff, and prevention. Social assistance focuses on the most vulnerable groups, such as the physically and mentally handicapped, orphans, women, and senior citizens.

In the case of catastrophes (earthquakes, floods, famines, etc.), it is necessary to provide immediate assistance to the people and areas affected. This responds to the current crisis and addresses issues of survival, health, shelter, food supplies, basic hygiene, emergency psychological assistance, childcare, and the temporary restoration of education.

Increasing populations and technological advances in developing countries often lead to massive deforestation, soil erosion as well as air and water pollution. Help here, for example, involves supporting the prudent management of natural resources, the introduction of economising measures, the reforestation of the countryside, and the education of local inhabitants.

As a result of natural catastrophes or armed conflicts, people in poor countries not only lose their lives, but also their homes, work, and other sources of livelihood. Elsewhere, natural resources are depleted and traditional livelihoods cease to be viable. Helping people with livelihood is always limited in terms of time. The aim is to achieve self-sufficiency for those who receive assistance.

In the summer of 2010 Pakistan was hit by massive torrential rains, causing the most extensive flooding in the country’s history. The flood swept down from the north and inundated extensive territories in the centre and south of the country. Almost 20 million inhabitants were directly affected by the flooding. More than seven million people lost their homes. The UN declared the catastrophe to have been one of the biggest disasters in recent decades. Immediately after the water started to subside, People in Need began supporting the displaced and returning population by focusing immediate needs of basic sanitation facilities, access to potable water, temporary shelter, food and non-food items. The organization supported the distribution of materials for the construction of temporary shelters, hygiene supplies and essential household items. At the same time, to mitigate the impact of lost livelihoods People in Need supported income generation opportunities for the returning population through community work programmes. These community work programmes involved essential work clearing the damage caused by flooding and were of particular benefit to the returning population as they provided work and the associated cash payments. As such the community work programmes decreased the dependency on food aid and enabled returnees to meet their own needs according to their own needs. In areas where the water had subsided in addition to well and drainage channel clearage, it was possible to regenerate fields using heavy machinery and to prepare them for the spring agricultural season. At the end of the year, People In Need transitioned from emergency support to reconstruction. In the three provinces that were affected, preparatory work on the reconstruction of several thousand simple brick houses was completed. In 2011, the construction will continue in partnership with the local population.

People in Need has been operating in Afghanistan for almost 10 years. The programme is based on the long-term development of remote rural areas, that otherwise do not receive much assistance. In rural areas activities focus on introducing and increasing the use of proven as well as innovative agricultural methods, stabilising incomes, and providing material support for farmers.

At the national level PIN works in partnership with the Ministry of Education and other stakeholders to seek systematic changes in agricultural education. By combining these two approaches, it seeks to improve the economic situation of the rural population.

At the village level, PIN cooperates with village development committees that are comprised of elected village representatives. These committees identify the problems that need to be addressed and are involved in decision making and implementation. Village committees comprise the backbone of future local councils and long-term cooperation with them guarantees the continued sustainability of the attained results.

In Afghanistan, PIN works in close partnership with local communities. This is achieved by building on traditional approaches enriched and combined with innovative methods.

People in Need started to work in Haiti immediately after January 12 2010, when the poorest Caribbean island was hit by one of the biggest and most devastating earthquakes in history. The disaster claimed more than 200,000 lives and left thousands more homeless and without work. PIN ensured basic humanitarian aid for residents of the capital Port-au-Prince via its partners from the international organisation Alliance2015. During the first phase, emergency shelters, hygiene kits, and drinking water were distributed and cash-for-work programmes were organised. A team of six emergency medical unit members from People in Need was dispatched to Port-au-Prince for almost three weeks. They primarily treated open wounds, infections and people with breathing difficulties.

Since February 2010, People in Need has been concentrating its aid programmes in the coastal region of Petit-Goâve, focusing on education and helping of children. Eight child friendly spaces provided psychosocial support and created a place where more than two and a half thousand children could play in safety.

PIN drew on its experiences from other countries, especially in the area of education. By building and equipping temporary learning spaces, training teachers and conducting campaigns in the community, PIN helped ten thousand children return to school. In the devastated country, which still suffers from severe lack of skilled labour, PIN organised a three-month vocational training in masonry and in carpentry. In October 2010, PIN got involved in a preventive campaign to fight cholera, which broke out on the island with unexpected force. Awareness was raised and hygiene conditions improved in nearly 40 schools.

The armed conflict between the Tamil Tigers (LTTE) and the Sri Lankan government came to an end in 2009. It lasted 26 years, claiming 100,000 victims while leaving hundreds of thousands more homeless and destitute. The war devastated the north of the country and almost 300,000 of its inhabitants were driven into camps for internally displaced people. People in Need has been working in Sri Lanka since 2005. At present, it supports people affected by the conflict, who lost all their possessions after relocating several times and staying in different refugee camps. It helps internally displaced persons to return to their original livelihood or to find new ways of supporting their families.

The organisation helped 50 families in the northern Vavuniya district to repair their homes, which had been destroyed during the war. In Kilinochchi district, PIN employed local people, who repaired roads, irrigation channels, schools, bridges and public spaces. The work significantly improved the running of municipalities and the new jobs ensured an adequate source of income for more than 3,100 families. In Mullaitivu district, 613 families received support: cows, goats, poultry, water pumps, sewing machines, fruit-tree seedlings, and small grants facilitated and accelerated the launch of small businesses and a return to normal life.

The conflict in the eastern part of the island ended several years ago. However, the area still lags substantially behind the rest of Sri Lanka. In Trincomalee district, PIN supported the livelihoods of villagers. It opened an ice-house and three fish storehouses for fishermen, who had previously had to buy expensive ice. A new dairy produce shop took care of the sale of local products. In Batticaloa district, PIN worked with local authorities and women’s associations, and it helped consolidate their relations with each other. Local authorities learnt how to independently implement their own projects. On the other side of the coin, people from the countryside found out which services they could demand from local government.

The eastern regions of Burma have been convulsed by currently one of the world’s longest-running civil wars. The fight between the army and ethnic resistance movements, and the persecution of minorities by the military junta has resulted in almost half a million internally displaced persons (IDPs) in the area.

IDPs have very limited access to healthcare. Governmental health services are practically non-existent in the border areas with Thailand, and international aid organisations rarely work there. Tens of thousands of people are dependent on basic clinics supplied from Thailand and on the operation of volunteer mobile healthcare teams. These teams are primarily organised and trained while in exile in Thailand.

SUPPORT FOR IDPS

The most frequent health problems among IDPs and other vulnerable population in eastern Burma are wounds (including wounds caused by landmines), malaria, malnutrition, influenza and diarrhoeal diseases. In 2010, PIN supplied ten clinics in eastern Burma with anti-malarics. It also supported the operation of dozens of mobile healthcare teams by supplying basic medicine and medical materials. The residents of Tha Da Der village, which was razed to the ground by governmental armed forces, received cash grants that enabled them to restart their original livelihoods, such as rearing pigs, hens and goats. At the same time, PIN supported the reconstruction of the school and destroyed houses. PIN’s partner organisations were also involved in documenting attacks and repressions of the civilian population by governmental armed forces by monitoring the situation and reporting on the ongoing humanitarian crisis.

CLINIC CONSTRUCTION AND SUPPORT TO REFUGEES

The clinic construction started in Loi Tai Leng IDP camp. Once completed, this clinic will provide healthcare services to people from surrounding villages. In connection with the November 2010 elections, 25,000 Burmese fled to Thailand as a result of intimidation and threats from the army and subsequent battles. In cooperation with the Mae Tao Clinic, PIN distributed food and non-food relief items to these refugees.

Cambodia is one of the poorest countries in the region. Many years of war, unrest and a brutal Khmer Rouge government exhausted the country. More than ten years after the conclusion of a peace deal, one third of the people are still living below the poverty line. Despite the country’s rapid economic growth, the situation in the Cambodian countryside is improving slowly. Besides poverty, Cambodia has also had to contend with a high maternal and infant mortality rate. Therefore, People in Need has focused on improving the livelihoods of the poorest people and on the healthcare sector.

SUPPORT OF SMALL BUSINESSES

In the countryside, people primarily make their living from farming, fishing and small-scale trading. Their livelihoods depend on the availability of natural resources. In cooperation with local partner organisations, PIN started supporting the poorest villagers in Kampong Chhnang province to pursue new livelihood opportunities. Several hundred people set up poultry-rearing or fish-farming operations. Other people began cultivating vegetables and mushrooms, or opened small businesses. Thanks to the construction of irrigation channels, farmers gained better access to water.

PIN also supports representatives from rural areas in dealing with local government. Local partner organisations have been trained in order to be better able to assist the rural communities.

MOTHER AND CHILD CARE

The high mortality rate among women giving birth and children is frequently caused by the inadequate supervision of deliveries. PIN strives to improve care for pregnant women and newborn children.

In 2010, PIN supported a total of 42 village health centres in Takeo province. It refurbished several centres, and supplied medical equipment to others. Throughout the year, local field workers have been visiting the centres and providing midwives with direct on-the-job training. Selected midwives completed an intensive month-long course at the provincial hospital. In several hundred local villages, they then conducted health awareness campaigns.

Furthermore, PIN supported the community based insurance funds for the poorest people. These funds are administered by Buddhist monks. Thanks to the funds, more than 20,000 people obtained free access to healthcare.

In Ethiopia, People in Need works in water and sanitation, agriculture and the environment, education and social development sectors. Extreme weather changes often culminate in humanitarian disasters. Floods in the inaccessible areas of the South Omo region caused an acute watery diarrhoea epidemic. PIN immediately began distributing cleaning chemicals, water filters, jerrycans, and soap, while also repairing wells and building latrines.

In 2010, PIN opened two schools and began constructing another two. At the same time, it is improving the quality of education. It published a manual of modern teaching methods, which was accredited by the Ethiopian Ministry of Education. PIN is also reducing the number of children who become victims of human trafficking. In three regions, an effective network, which intercepts vulnerable children and facilitates their reintegration was set up.

Another area of interest for PIN is ensuring food security. Support was provided for the development of small businesses run by farmers and women. In the Southern Nations region, it introduced the cultivation of improved crops with greater yields. It also helped protect the land from soil erosion and built community seedbanks and mills.

People in Need has been active in Angola, one of the least developed countries in Africa, since 2006. In poverty stricken areas it pays particular attention to agicultural development, education, water management and health education.

AGRARIAN CENTRE
In 2010, the Agrarian Centre, a model farm with poultry house built by PIN, organized courses for local farmers. Thanks to micro-grants, they subsequently set up their fields and poultry or livestock-rearing. The Centre employs carpenters and welders, its shop sells eggs, vegetables, seeds and agrarian tools. Farmers may de-husk rice or order ploughing by tractor.

EDUCATION
For illiterate residents of Bié province, PIN organizes courses in reading, writing, Portuguese and mathematics, supplemented by topics of hygiene, civic education or natural sciences. Primary school teachers from rural areas are further trained in distance courses. PIN adapts teaching manuals, and has constructed a pedagogical centre and a primary school.

WATER AND SANITATION
The programme focus on building wells, health awareness activities at schools and in rural areas, training health volunteers, repairing school latrines and installing systems for harvesting rainwater. In Cuemba, PIN is building an ecological dump, collection sites and offers trainings in dealing with waste management to both residents and local government.

Although the Democratic Republic of Congo abounds in vast mineral wealth, it ranks among one of the ten least-developed countries in the world. This is caused by an ineffective state administration and unstable security situation in the east of the country, which the local population has been enduring for more than ten years. People in Need has been active in the eastern province of South Kivu since 2009. It primarily operates in remote rural areas, whose inhabitants have no access to basic services, education or safe drinking water.

HEALTHCARE
People in Need has focused primarily on the health sector. It focuses on the support of the centres, particularly through the training of health centre personnel, provision of essential drugs and equipment or by provision of financial support in order to ensure free primary treatment of IDPs and vulnerable women. PIN has also ensured the provision of sanitation and hygiene facilities in the centres. In a country that still has to contend with high child-mortality rates, PIN launched an information campaign to educate the women in obstetrical care and the causes of child illnesses. In 2010, the construction of a water-supply system in the Bunyakiri region, which made safe water available to more than 60,000 local residents, was successfully completed. PIN also began systematically devoting itself to the area of education. It supplied 21 schools with teaching materials and it trained teachers in the national curriculum and participatory teaching methods. PIN also continued supporting victims of sexual violence and provided them with psychosocial and economic assistance. Victims of sexual violence in Congo are often stigmatised and isolated from the rest of society. An awareness campaign on radio and moderated discussions with local community also helped to reduce violence against women.

Namibia is a country with the largest gap between rich and poor in the world. Every fifth Namibian is HIV-positive. Half of the people are unemployed. The average lifespan is 50 years of age, and the generation of working age, infected by HIV/AIDS, leaves hundreds of thousands of orphans in their wake.

People in Need focused on supporting community members infected and affected by HIV/AIDS. From 2003 to August 2010, it operated in the desert region of Karas in the south of the country. Even since its mission was completed, it has been intensively supporting two successor organisations. In this way it fulfills the basic idea of development cooperation – to help people in poorer countries to help themselves.

A SHELTERED WORKSHOP IN A SLUM

In 2004, PIN established a sheltered handcraft workshop where HIV-positive women could earn a living and work in a safe and supportive environment. In 2009, the workshop was handed over to the local community. The Namibian organization Karas Huisen Crafts (KHC) was established. Since 2010, KHC has been managed by a local director and provided work to 52 women. Their products continue to be purchased by PIN and sold on the Czech market. All profits go back to the sheltered workshop.

At the beginning of the year, PIN established another successor organisation – Namibian People in Need (NAMPIN). NAMPIN continues PIN’s work with HIV-positive mothers, for whom it organises support meetings and educational gatherings. It also provides them with baby formula. Thanks to the formula, women do not have to breastfeed their babies, thereby reducing the risk of transferring the HIV virus via the mother’s milk. NAMPIN also helps the homosexual minority. It supports the human rights of gays and lesbians, while also doing prevention of HIV within this high-risk group. NAMPIN also devotes itself to helping HIV-positive individuals, who undergo anti-retroviral treatment.

In 2010, People in Need continued to work in Armenia in sectors such as migration, economic development and support to civil society.

MANAGEMENT OF MIGRATION FLOWS

PIN’s main goal was to mitigate the reasons that lead people to leave Armenia and pursued the reintegration of those who wanted to return. Five regional centres continued to provide returnees and potential migrants with civil and legal advisory services. Centres assisted in document processing or employment support. They also offered the possibility of requalification and small grants for starting a new business, which enabled the reintegration of returnees.

PIN also continued with a journalist award where the best-quality media output on migration issues was appraised. Furthermore, PIN organised a journalism workshop on the subject of migration. Attention was also drawn to the risks of illegal migration with a campaign that directed people towards an information hotline and regional migration centres. AUNA, the partner organisation continued its efforts to update the relevant parts of the Civil Code and to train state officials.

CHILD TRAFFICKING PREVENTION

People in Need sought to highlight the issue of child trafficking, and coordinated its activity in line with the Armenian National Action Plan. The focus was the prevention of child trafficking and to raise awareness of the given issue on various levels, from the ministries involved to primary schools as well as among the general public. Other activities focused on the protection of vulnerable children, revising legal regulations, and providing information services, as well as direct support to children in the street or in schools.

Besides an information campaign, in 2010 PIN trained teachers, educators and other specialists on issues that include prevention of child trafficking, protection and assistance for those at risk. Furthermore, it sought to improve cooperation between state and non-governmental organisations to assist in the modernisation of the Armenian legal code. The main success was that PIN directly influenced changes to laws by participating in an intergovernmental working group, which dealt with making amendments to laws.

In 2010, People in Need once again concentrated on supporting civic initiatives and internally displaced persons from the Georgia-Abkhazia conflict. PIN helped people returning to the country to start up their own businesses.

REFUGEES INTEGRATION
PIN’s aid to IDPs from Abkhazia included improvement of living conditions. For IDPs, who often rely on social welfare benefits, PIN aimed to ensure accessible social services and to motivate the target population. PIN also provided small grants, to those who plan to start a small business.

CIVIL SOCIETY DEVELOPMENT
In 2010, PIN supported civic initiatives in five locations of the Imeretie region. Thanks to small grants, a total of 24 projects aimed at young people were implemented. Students established school clubs focusing on the environment and anti-drugs issues; established a library or organised cultural events. Local administration representatives also helped with the preparation and implementation of six projects.

SUPPORT OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
In the Imereti region, PIN continued to support entrepreneurs and farmers. Micro-grants enabled the launch of 32 small businesses and the establishment of an agricultural cooperative. During trainings, participants gained knowledge about business management, as well as new technologies. A pilot activity, where 50% of the grant is returned back to community proved to be a great success. This type of pay back fund is then used for the benefit of the community, e.g. to repair a rural ambulance or to furnish a kindergarten.

SUPPORT OF RETURNEES FROM FRANCE
Grants for commencing business activities enabled reintegration of returnees from France. Thanks to these grants, nine new businesses opened in Tbilisi and its environs. For example, beneficiaries opened a small snack bar, a confectionery and a hairdresser’s. PIN’s aid included financial support, social assistance, expert training and the preparation of a business plan for the enterprise.

IRAQ
For the seventh year now, People in Need has been supporting the development of civil society, primarily in the southern provinces. Together with local partners, it once again provided assistance to local communities in dealing with the most pressing community problems and in improving communication with local authorities. PIN organised trainings, linked residents with local administration and provided financial support for the community groups to address selected problems. Thanks to the improved security situation, PIN moved its office from the Jordanian city of Amman to the city of Arbil in Iraqi Kurdistan.

JORDAN
In Jordan, People in Need, together with its partner organisation Antares, trained employees of NGOs that provide psychosocial services to Iraqi refugees on Jordanian soil.

LEBANON
The One World in Schools (OWIS) project continued among secondary school teachers and students in 2010. The project was brought to Lebanon by People in Need in 2009. This education programme offers schools documentary films and teaching materials for lessons on topical themes concerning today’s world and modern history. By screening documentary films it increases awareness of human rights, civil and intercultural themes. At present, OWIS is proceeding fully under the direction of the local partner organisation, the Lebanese Centre for Civic Education.

MOLDOVA

Moldova is a predominantly agricultural country in Europe. The country is grappling with its post-communist legacy – low efficiency and corruption in the state administration and a passive citizenry. For these reasons, People in Need has been focusing on supporting civic associations in rural areas of Moldova. It seeks to encourage local residents to participate in resolving local problems. In 2010, experts trained 76 representatives of NGOs and local councils in project writing and project management as well as in involving citizens in public affairs. PIN subsequently supported nine small NGO projects, such as the reconstruction of a school canteen, the introduction of a social canteen for abandoned old people, setting up a school playground. The organisation succeeded in actively involving the Moldovan public and local authorities in the projects carried out.

KOSOVO

In Kosovo in 2010, People in Need supported associations of people with impaired sight and hearing. Due to the recent armed conflict there, as well as the low level of education and healthcare, there is a large number of people with disabilities in Kosovo. In the course of the year, PIN delivered equipment to the school for the visually impaired in Peja. Special technical equipment, such as electronic organisers, Braille displays and a relief graphic printer enables the visually impaired to use computer technology. Thanks to the equipment that has been supplied, visually impaired children can learn how to work with a computer, which considerably increases their chances of succeeding in the labour market.

ROMANIA

In Romania’s Banat region, an area with six Czech villages, People in Need continued to support the development of environmentally-friendly tourism. Agrotourism has become an important part of the economic activity of these Czechs, who have no other possible livelihood due to the poverty of the region. In the course of the spring, People in Need updated the internet portal Banat.cz. PIN trained local people who provide accommodation to tourists. It carried out maintenance work on market tourist trails, and throughout the year supported the operation of an internet information centre. Around the village of Gerník, PIN marked horse trails which are used by equine tourists. In the village of Rovensko, it extended the wireless network (Wi-Fi) from the local school to the homes of farmers, so that they would be able to communicate better with people interested in accommodation as well as with guests.

Mongolia

Mongolia is the most sparsely populated country in the world, and nomadic husbandry is the main source of livelihood. People in Need began working in Mongolia in response to a cold winter (dzud) at the beginning of 2010, during which more than 8 million livestock perished (i.e. 18% of the total number before the dzud). The death of the animals represented a great threat to the herdsmen, especially the poorest of them, who were unable to prepare for the next winter. In the autumn of 2010, PIN distributed a total of 225 tonnes of straw to 85 families, who still had some livestock left, in the Khenti region east of Ulan Bator. It also supplied hay to two local authorities who administer reserves in the event of freezing weather. A total of 39 families, who lost all their livestock and who could only find a way of making a living with great difficulty, obtained cash grants to at least partially restore their original livelihood.

Kyrgyzstan

Ethnic violence in the Osh region of Kyrgyzstan, which was particularly aimed at the Uzbek community, culminated in the death of several hundred victims in June 2010. Roughly a thousand were injured and 100,000 people fled Kyrgyzstan. In the city of Osh itself, more than two thousand homes were burnt to the ground. PIN lent its partner organisation ACTED two of its experienced workers, who organised the distribution of food and other material.

China

In April 2010, China’s Qinghai province was hit by a devastating earthquake that measured 7.1 on the Richter Scale. According to official data, 2,700 people lost their lives and more than 12,000 were injured. In the cold Yushu prefecture, which is primarily settled by ethnic Tibetans, the natural disaster destroyed more than 80% of houses and left tens of thousands of people without a roof over their heads. To a large extent, the official aid from the Chinese government failed to reach them. Through its partner organisation People in Need distributed more than 30 tonnes of food, 144 insulated tents, more than 300 folding beds, warm blankets and other materials necessary for surviving in the difficult conditions of the Tibetan plateau.

Gaza

At the beginning of 2010, in the unstable environment of the Gaza Strip, in cooperation with the university in Ramallah, People in Need began training 22 local psychosocial workers who provide assistance to people, especially children, traumatised by the armed conflict at the turn of 2008 and 2009. Psychosocial workers from nine communities underwent comprehensive training in stress management, crisis intervention, and expert consultancy. They were acquainted with international guidelines for working in crisis situations and they learnt how to increase the resilience of groups and individuals.

SUMATRA
In the first months of 2010, People in Need completed the construction of 40 temporary dwellings for earthquake victims. With the help of its partner organisation PADMA, a series of training events was held on the subject of building techniques in seismically active areas. A children’s day centre, set up in a tent city, was handed over by PIN to the local administration. It ended its work in the stricken area in March 2010.

MONTENEGRO
In December 2010, the countries of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, and Montenegro experienced its worst flooding of the past 100 years. Based on requests from Montenegro’s Civil Defence and Bosnia’s Ministry of the Interior, People in Need sent material aid in December, including power generators, blankets, inflatable dinghies, inflatable mattresses, tents and other equipment.

CHECHNYA
In the North Caucasus, cooperation continued with local NGO, Centre for Humanitarian Aid (CHA). After PIN’s work was disallowed in 2005, this NGO continued the humanitarian aid effort. Among other things, it distributed food and monitored the reconstruction of homes. It obtained the support of PIN to build up its own capacities for further work in Chechnya and Ingushetia. CHA is now seeking to get involved in an extensive project to construct housing for internally displaced persons in a number of North Caucasian republics.

In 2010, the Czech Republic was hit by three large floods, which claimed the lives of at least 10 people. First, water hit communities in the Olomouc, Moravian-Silesian, Zlín, and Ústí nad Labem regions in May. Smaller floods hit also the Pardubice region in June and July. In August, torrential rains caused flash floods in the Liberec and Ústí regions. PIN succeeded in raising 1.7 million EUR from the general public and companies to assist flood victims. Three programmes were funded from these collections.

MATERIAL AID
On the second day after the largest flood in August, People in Need dispatched trucks with material aid. This comprised of 22,120 litres of disinfectants, 4,425 pieces of cleaning equipment, 1,876 litres of detergent, 10,282 pieces of protective equipment, 25,700 bottles of drinking water, 1,600 units of repellent, sanitary supplies, food packages, and other items. People in Need then distributed material aid to humanitarian depots in 21 communities.

DIRECT FINANCIAL AID FOR HOUSEHOLDS
People in Need diverted the largest part of funds from the public collections toward direct financial assistance for households. Field workers conducted two rounds of a detailed survey of 1,637 affected households that were interested in being part of the project. Based on the data from the field survey, PIN’s flood committee decided on the allocation and amount of contributions to help repair houses and to purchase basic equipment. Important factors in the decision-making process included the extent of damage to the property, the financial options of the household for restorative work, and the social conditions. Altogether, PIN was active in 91 communities and it provided 924 households with 1,208 financial contributions ranging from 400 EUR to 7,000 EUR to restore their homes.

PUBLIC INTEREST PROJECTS
The floods also caused large damage to municipal property. Consequently, PIN also focused on financially supporting repairs to important public buildings and infrastructure, as well as projects aimed at preventing floods or reducing their consequences. PIN’s programme provided financial support for the repair of three bridges, two cultural buildings, two fire stations, the restoration of sewerage, drainage ditches, cleaning river beds, equipping kindergartens, building outdoor schools for children from Troubky, and other projects. Altogether, PIN supported 16 projects in 14 communities.

Every year, poverty and its attendant problems kill more people in the developing world than widely publicised natural disasters and wars combined. That was the reason behind launching the long-term fundraising campaign Real Aid.

HELP FOR THE POOREST
Thanks to donors to the Real Aid collection, PIN provided 42 village health centres in Cambodia with sustainable access to electricity, potable water, medical supplies and equipment, which has helped to improve the quality of health care. A Czech nurse also trained local nurses and an awareness campaign was conducted in villages.

In 2010, People in Need began working in one of the poorest country in Europe – Moldova, where PIN started to support education for disabled children. It has also launched a project to help abandoned elderly people.

In 2005, People in Need built a boarding school in Ethiopia, with capacity for over 600 pupils. Some of these are orphans, who receive additional support from PIN. Besides the opportunity to study at secondary school, they have access to basic medical care and are fed at the school. Some of the children are provided with accommodation in the school compound.

Almost 20% of the population of Namibia is HIV-positive. People in Need provided assistance to 123 mothers suffering from this illness. Together with psychosocial advice, PIN distributed baby formula, which prevents the transfer of HIV while breastfeeding. People in Need has continued to support a sheltered workshop in Namibia. Its products are sold at www.nama.cz.

By the end of the year, the collection was supported by more than 3,000 individuals and companies. Most of them donate 8–12 EUR per month.

We would like to thank everyone who has made contributions for their support! If you like the idea of Real Aid, become a regular donor and register at www.skutecnypomoc.cz!

REAL GIFT
In 2010, the sale of gift certificates continued at the charity e-shop www.skutechny*darek.cz. Donors can purchase items such as a goat, a cow, a sewing machine or a school blackboard. Suggestions for gift certificates are made on the basis of the requirements of People in Need’s offices abroad, and the price of a certificate corresponds to the price of the specific aid provided in the actual location. All the proceeds from the sale of gift certificates go to the Real Aid collection. The shop is becoming increasingly popular.

In 2010, almost 18,000 gift certificates were sold, which is twice what was sold in the previous year. Thanks to the Real Gift project, PIN in 2010 purchased and donated 634 goats, 167 sheep, 85 cows, 6,422 chicken, 45,363 trees, 240 jerry-cans, equipment for several schools, material for the construction of several wells and materials for saving the lives of dozens of pregnant women. The animals and materials are purchased by PIN directly in the countries where they are distributed.

People in Need has been recruiting supporters who are willing to contribute only 0,30 EUR per day. Even such an amount can save lives.

Since its foundation, one of People in Need’s most important activities has been helping persecuted individuals and supporting civil society in repressive states and in countries undergoing a transition to democracy. The activities of PIN are also led by the conviction that these issues should be an important pillar of Czech and European foreign policies.

In 2010, PIN supported democracy and human rights through programmes focused on Burma, Belarus, Cuba, Moldova (the separatist region of Transnistria), Russia and Ukraine (Crimea). Some of these countries saw dramatic developments in 2010. In Cuba, most of the 75 dissidents imprisoned during the Black Spring of 2003 were freed from prison and expelled from the country. The Burmese military junta decided to change uniforms for suits and, after two decades, held a blatantly rigged election. In Belarus, there was an unexpected resurgence of widespread repression following the presidential election in December. PIN did its best to react to all of those developments through its programmes. In Cuba, PIN’s efforts have gradually shifted towards supporting independent civic groups through systematic and long-term support and help with individual projects. In Burma, efforts to inform about the real conditions in the country in the pre- and post-election period have gone hand in hand with continued direct aid. Immediately after the election-related repression in Belarus, PIN increased its aid to the families of people who have been imprisoned or forced to flee the country.

In 2010, PIN also continued to help develop links between the Chinese Charter 08 initiative and important people and the general public in the Czech Republic. It also contributed to the successful nomination of one of the main authors of Charter 08, the jailed dissident Liu Xiaobo, for the Nobel Peace Prize.

TYPES OF AID PROVIDED

The type of support offered by PIN relates to the needs of the target country and its form of regime. Therefore, the Centre is mainly focused on the following activities:

- Direct humanitarian aid for the persecuted and their families (financial and material aid, medicines, legal and moral support). Funding for this direct aid mainly comes from PIN’s Club of Friends

- Direct assistance to human rights defenders and pro-democracy civic initiatives (material, technical support, seminars, provision of information, small grants, educational projects)

- Building the capacities of civil society (trainings, cooperation with local authorities, study visits and long-term internships in the Czech Republic etc.)

- Supporting independent media and journalists (material support, education and trainings, connecting journalists in repressive states with the Czech Republic and EU)

- Cooperation with organisations and authorities of other EU member states focused on human rights and democracy

- Raising awareness in the Czech Republic and at EU level about human rights violations in repressive countries.
In 2010, PIN began, with the support of Club of Friend, to use a new tool designed to assist dissidents and activists from the former Soviet countries who, as a result of their work, find themselves in need of immediate help.

PIN also staged a number of public events, including a traveling exhibition about activists and journalists murdered in Russia; several events in support of the Russian “Strategy-31” initiative; a march in support of Liu Xiaobo; a gathering commemorating the first anniversary of the crushing of post-election protests in Iran; and the traditional birthday event for the Burmese dissident Aung San Suu Kyi. PIN also initiated five hearings at UNESCO on the issue of the unjust imprisonment of artists and academics in Burma, Cuba and China.

PIN continues to publish information about human rights within the framework of the Czech Republic and the EU. It is a co-founder of the European Partnership for Democracy (www.epd.eu) and the platform Demas (www.demas.cz) that bring together all the main Czech NGOs in the pro-democracy field. PIN is also active in such international associations as the EuroCuba NGO Network, the EuroBurma Network, Belarus Implementing Partners Forum, and the World Movement for Democracy. In 2010, PIN was active in the Eastern Partnership’s Civil Society Forum, where it is currently acting as the coordinator of the human rights sub-group. It also became a steering committee member of the EU-Russia Civil Society Forum, which fosters contacts and cooperation between NGOs in Russia and EU states.

HOMO HOMINI AWARD

Every year at the beginning of the One World international film festival, PIN presents the Homo Homini award to an individual who has made a significant contribution to the advancement of human rights, democracy, and the non-violent resolution of political conflict.

In March 2011, the 2010 Homo Homini award was presented to the Kyrgyz human rights activist Azimjan Askarov for his long-term, dangerous work in monitoring human rights violations and conditions in jails, and his help for the unjustly imprisoned. PIN recognised above all the bravery with which Askarov and his organisation have succeeded in uncovering a number of cases of police brutality, resulting in the investigation and sentencing of the culprits. The cases included suspicious deaths and rapings while in custody, false accusations and extracting of testimonies by torture. Azimjan Askarov was himself arrested following the ethnic unrest in southern Kyrgyzstan in June 2010 and sentenced in a manipulated trial to life sentence. Despite the fact that no reliable evidence was presented against him, Askarov found himself in the cells of his former clients and in the hands of colleagues of those who had been convicted on the basis of his investigation of police crimes. Askarov’s testimony was the result of violent pressure and both international organisations and the Kyrgyz ombudsman judged that his trial had been unfair and political. Azimjan Askarov’s award was therefore also symbolically dedicated to other human rights activists that regimes have tried to criminalise through false convictions.

“In 2010, PIN supported democracy and human rights through programmes focused on Burma, Belarus, Cuba, Moldova (the separatist region of Transnistria), Russia and Ukraine (Crimea).”
Despite the fact there were several important events in Burma in 2010, they did not lead to fundamental change. The country’s first parliamentary elections in 20 years were held in November, though when the results were announced it was clear that the Burmese government had no intention of releasing its grip on absolute power. A great part of the opposition was forbidden from taking part, the elections were rigged, independent observers were not allowed into the country, and international organisations described the elections as deeply flawed.

A week after the elections, the leading opposition figure, Nobel Peace Prize laureate Aung San Suu Kyi, was released from house arrest, offering Burmese society new hope. However, more than 2,000 political prisoners remain in appalling conditions in Burma’s jails and brutal human rights abuses persist. PIN therefore continued to support democratic activists and independent journalists in 2010.

PROJECTS TO HELP BURMA AND THAILAND

In cooperation with local partners, PIN helped the families of 58 political prisoners in Burma last year. It also held a training in photo-journalism for independent journalists, and continued its contribution to civil society development through direct support of informal groups. PIN also continued to support a network of 12 organisations that monitor human rights abuses in Burma.

The groups received small grants, while their members underwent training and six got to experience study stays in Europe. People in Need also held three seminars aimed at passing on the experience of the Czech Republic and other central European states in the transition to democracy and education reforms.

BUDGET: 401,838 EUR

INTERNATIONAL SUPPORT FOR THE BURMESE MOVEMENT

PIN continued to raise awareness of the situation in Burma in the Czech Republic and other Central and Eastern European states. Thirty screenings of films about Burma were held, along with several panel discussions with Burmese guests on the elections and the post-election situation.

Cuba

After pressure from the international community in the previous year, Cuba in 2010 released the rest of the 75 dissidents who had been sentenced and convicted en masse in 2003. However, their harsh sentences were not overturned and most of them were expelled from the island along with their families.

The simultaneous laying off of half a million state employees was intended as a means to save the collapsing economy. As the regime does not have the means to pay unemployment benefits, the government promised to issue licenses permitting 178 types of small business activities. However, acquiring a permit is extremely complicated and the first of the self-employed have to pay tax of up to 40 percent. Furthermore, another half a million state employees will be let go in the coming years. Recent developments indicate that rather than a genuine programme to revive the Cuban economy, we are witnessing an underfunded attempt on the part of the gerontocracy to cling to their power.

Direct Support for Cuba

In the course of 2010, PIN supported the families of 70 political prisoners. Independent sources suggest that, even after the release of the group imprisoned in 2003, around 50 people remain in Cuban jails for political reasons, while many opposition activists have suffered short-term repression, detention and intimidation. Though the regime has changed tactics and now employs more frequent and shorter prison terms, PIN still monitors every such case.

In 2010, People in Need further developed its support for a Cuban civic society emerging in difficult circumstances. Thanks to close cooperation and frequent communication with partners on the island, PIN was able to focus on helping raise the professionalism and transparency of independent projects. Thanks to training and support, local partners are better able to assess the needs of their communities. Last year, PIN worked directly with 15 groups. Educational and social centres, independent libraries, organisations monitoring human rights violations and independent music and theatre groups were among the recipients of support.

International Cooperation and Informational Activities

PIN works to inform the general public and representatives of European governments and institutions about the real state of human rights on the “island of freedom” and calls on the EU and its members to maintain a responsible approach to foreign policy. PIN uses its active membership in the Euro-Cuba NGO Network, a network of EU-based organizations focused on Cuba. PIN also strives to keep the general public in Europe informed of the current situation on the island through its cooperation with independent press agencies in Cuba. Their articles either reach the media directly or provide background material for editors in at least 10 European countries. Czech and foreign readers can read pieces about current events on the island on the website Cubalog.eu. Independent journalists and foreign experts contribute to a print version, Cuba-Europe Dialogues.

Belarus

Presidential elections were held in Belarus in December 2010. While the regime refused to allow the opposition to mount a genuine campaign, it did not employ the usual pre-election repression. Therefore, the unusually tough intervention against demonstrations following the elections was all the more surprising. Gatherings were brutally broken up, over 700 people were imprisoned, and some of them were later handed prison sentences of up to 15 years.

COOPERATION WITH LOCAL PARTNERS

Thanks to the support of PIN’s Club of Friends, the Parents Committee, which is made up of the parents of young activists and members of the democratic opposition, continued its activities. In 2010, the committee helped 35 families.

Long-term cooperation between PIN and its partners in Belarus allowed for a rapid and flexible reaction to the wave of arrests that followed the elections. Using funds from PIN’s Club of Friends, human rights groups were immediately able to secure material aid for the detained and their families, who found themselves in dire straits just a few days before Christmas.

PIN also gave 15 small grants to regional civic groups and launched a series of seminars for Belarusian law students. In 2010, it acquired the distribution rights for six new documentaries and provided them to groups within Belarus who were able to hold screenings in cities in the country.

Russia

The number of politically motivated murders in Russia declined in 2010. Nevertheless, attacks did take place. In April, Moscow judge Eduard Chuvashov was murdered, while journalist Oleg Kashin was brutally beaten in November. These attacks make it clear that personal courage is still needed to defend democratic values in Russia.

PIN trained 12 young activists in the use of video and film in public campaigning. It also supported the holding of a human rights festival in St. Petersburg and the creation of a number of short videos that helped human rights issues reach both the independent media and the general public.

INTERNATIONAL SUPPORT

PIN organised a number of public events both in the Czech Republic and elsewhere in Europe aimed at drawing attention to human rights issues in Russia. These included a travelling exhibition entitled Silenced Voices dedicated to human rights activists murdered in recent years; holding a film screening and debate with a representative of the leading Russian human rights group Memorial at the European Parliament; and a series of events held on the 31st day of the month in support of freedom of assembly. PIN has also become a member of the initiative group of the EU-Russia Civil Society Forum, an NGO platform. And together with the DEMAS association, it pledged to hold the Forum’s founding conference in the Czech Republic in spring 2011.

HUMAN RIGHTS

PIN helped the families of human rights activists in Belarus. It also held several events related to human rights in Russia.
MOLODVA, UKRAINE

MOLDOVA (TRANSNISTRIA)
PIN has been operating in Transnistria, an internationally unrecognised separatist region of Moldova, since 2006. The Russian-backed local authoritarian regime employs propaganda to create the spectre of an “internal enemy” and reinforces the region’s isolation. Its policies include the systematic abuse of human rights, as illustrated in 2010 when two young people received long prison terms in rigged trials on charges of spying. The regime also uses intimidation to limit the freedom of NGOs, who are under the supervision of the Interior Ministry and state security.

DEVELOPMENT OF CIVIC SOCIETY
PIN supports the development of civic society in Transnistria. In 2010, it organised a training cycle focused on communications skills attended by nearly 60 activists. They were also offered to attend English courses aimed at breaking down the language barrier and reducing their reliance on Russian language sources. PIN handed out 13 grants for projects such as a human rights summer school; free legal advice for rural inhabitants; the use of media to highlight legal breaches at the region’s borders; and a summer school for disadvantaged children. It also organised a week-long study stay in the Czech Republic for 12 representatives of NGOs. Two activists also took part in a two-month internship. At the end of the year, PIN launched a series of screenings of human rights documentaries.

UKRAINE
PIN has been operating on Ukraine’s Crimean peninsula for five years. Since 2009 it has been working with local partner Top Kaya, whose analysis of civic society in Crimea has helped identify target groups and their basic needs. Last year PIN concentrated its energies on supporting the development of initiative groups and grassroots NGOs in peripheral areas of the peninsula (western, eastern and northern parts of Crimea). Both the authorities and international organisations pay less attention to the situation there than in the south and the centre of the peninsula or in the rest of Ukraine, meaning civic society is less developed in those regions.

SUPPORT FOR NGOS
In 2010, PIN organised a series of seminars in Crimea covering a range of themes from the principles of civic society to teamwork, fundraising and project cycle management. Other activities included providing small grants to support particular projects of the local NGOs, consultations of experts, presentations of relevant donors, and study trips for leaders of the Crimean organisations to the Czech Republic. Also, PIN created and administered a website which has served as a meeting platform since then and proved to be a valuable source of information for the NGO sector on the peninsula. During 2010, PIN’s partner organisation Top Kaya set up a coordinating and advisory centre in Simferopol, the capital of the Autonomous Republic of Crimea.

The 12th annual One World International Human Rights Documentary Film Festival took place in Prague and 29 other cities and towns in the Czech Republic in March and April 2010. Total attendance exceeded 100,000 and the programme featured 101 documentary films from 37 countries around the world.

Events in Iran were highlighted at the 2010 One World festival through a thematic section entitled Focus on Iran, which included films documenting the violence that followed the rigged presidential elections in June 2009 and the delicate issues surrounding the country’s strict interpretation of Islamic law. Other thematic sections included Tolerant – Intolerant, which focused on the dangers of racism, nationalism and neo-Nazism in Europe, and Green Challenges, which turned the spotlight on environmental issues.

GET YOUR AUDIENCE!
Through its motto “How do you get the world’s attention?” the festival challenged viewers to take an active approach to spreading its message. In this spirit, mini Do It Yourself One World festivals were organised by teams of volunteers at Prague universities and clubs.

In addition to providing direct aid, PIN has always tried to bring information and testimonies about events in poor and authoritarian countries to the attention of a wider audience, and later incorporate it into the education system. The desire to inform, which in the early 1990s was linked to the work of journalists at the Lidové Noviny Foundation, has since grown into several independent informational and educational projects. These projects react to the shortcomings and challenges in the media, education and civic sectors and have all assumed respected positions in their fields. PIN’s information and education projects have covered a broad range of themes, including development, global and intercultural education, provided audiovisual materials and methodological aids on human rights issues, the environment, 20th century Czechoslovak history, and migration.

In 2010, PIN organised hundreds of film screenings for school pupils, along with dozens of seminars and workshops. It took part in or organised numerous conferences, exhibits and competitions for children, issued several publications, and prepared newspaper supplements and dozens of articles for the Czech print and online media.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMMES
The One World in Schools (OWIS) educational programme has been making documentary films available to schools for teaching purposes for nine years. Since 2001, when during the One World film festival OWIS held special screenings for secondary school pupils, the number of schools involved and using audiovisual materials in everyday teaching has risen to over 2,800. OWIS has found documentary films to be a useful aid in teaching about often difficult issues like the experience of totalitarian and authoritarian regimes, natural disasters, poverty and disease.

The Stories of Injustice project, meanwhile, is focused on modern Czechoslovak history, a subject often lacking in most Czech secondary-school curricula. OWIS today publishes audiovisual study packs, holds seminars, organises student film clubs, festival school screenings, competitions, exhibits, and an International School of Documentary Film. Pupils and teachers from Poland, Slovakia, Estonia, Sweden, Romania, Bulgaria, Kosovo, Bosnia, Georgia, Austria and Lebanon have taken part in joint projects.

PIN’s Variants educational programme has for over a decade been offering an informational service and methodological support in the area of intercultural and global development education. Every year there are over 1,800 participants, most of them teachers from primary and secondary schools. Between 2001 and 2010 nearly 12,000 people have taken part in the Variants programme’s seminars.

In the past two years, the programme has also focused on children with specific educational needs from socially excluded localities. The aim is to help those children enter the mainstream education sys-

INFORMATION AND EDUCATIONAL PROJECTS

People in Need’s educational programmes include numerous courses and workshops for teachers, police officers, social workers, state officials and pupils and students of all ages. The programmes are designed to encourage them to go further, through individual and group tutoring, fostering an educational environment in the home, training teachers and building partnerships with schools, NGOs and other institutions.

Find out more about educational programmes on pages 40–43.

MEDIA PROGRAMMES

People in Need’s media projects are mainly aimed at providing information on the lives of minorities and the issues of migration, development cooperation and poverty-stricken states. The Migration Awareness Programme was created in October 2002 in reaction to the stereotyped portrayal of foreigners and refugees in Czech media. The goal was to provide objective information that would contribute to the improved co-habitation of immigrants and rest of Czech society. Projects are aimed at both general problems and the lives of individuals and families in the Czech Republic.

Through the Let’s create a more diverse media! project, financed by the European Programme for Integration and Migration, PIN has, since 2008, been encouraging a balanced media portrayal of immigrants and supporting their integration. In 2010, it helped foreigners who are members of the Migrants’ Forum group find a media voice of their own, instead of relying on Czech experts and officials to speak for them.

Projects aimed at providing information on development cooperation have been carried out by PIN since 2003. Its Development Awareness programme has helped incite the interest of the Czech public, state officials and media in the issue of international development cooperation and the problems of a globalised world. It works to boost the image of the Czech Republic as a developed donor country which is ready to help developing countries and work with them effectively.

The Development Awareness team currently carry out projects such as The Price of Water, highlighting issues linked to access to water and sanitation in the developing world. They also post articles on the Rozvojka.cz website and publish a regular bulletin with the same name. An important element of the team’s mission is working systematically with journalists, providing them with information manuals and regular newsletters. Every year, the programme organises trips for two journalists to developing countries; most Czech media lack the budget for such trips and only carry agency reports. The Development Awareness team also takes part in the campaign Czech Republic Against Poverty run by local NGOs.

Find out more about the media programme on pages 44–45.

COLLECTIONS AND CAMPAIGNS

People in Need announced four SOS collections in 2010: for earthquake-hit Haiti; for Pakistan in the wake of its extensive floods; and twice for the victims of flooding in the Czech Republic. As well as promoting the collections, it regularly provided information on the afflicted places and how the donations were used. PIN’s Media Department also provided support for the long-term collections Let’s Build a School in Africa and Real Aid.

“Students and teachers form Poland, Slovakia, Estonia, Sweden, Romania, Bulgaria, Kosovo, Bosnia, Georgia, Austria and Lebanon took part in educational projects.”

Students and teachers from Poland, Slovakia, Estonia, Sweden, Romania, Bulgaria, Kosovo, Bosnia, Georgia, Austria and Lebanon took part in educational projects.
ACTIVITIES FOR TEACHERS
One World in Schools offers documentary films, audiovisual materials and other methodological tools for teaching about contemporary issues and modern history to schools. In the nine years of its existence it has become one of the Czech Republic’s largest educational programmes. In 2010, OWIS produced new educational materials and was engaged in diverse activities. Teachers received educational sets for teaching human rights, modern Czechoslovak history and active civil society, as well as for development and media education. The release of individual educational sets was accompanied by seminars accredited by the Ministry of Education. Preparations were also launched for sets on environmental education for primary and secondary schools. During 2010, seminars for future teachers were held at pedagogical faculties at universities in Prague, Ústí nad Labem, Plzeň and Hradec Králové.

STORIES OF INJUSTICE
One World in Schools actively supports the teaching of modern Czechoslovak history. There were two especially noteworthy events organized in this project in 2010. In June, a "Week of Films for Schools" was held at Prague’s Světozor cinema with one screening accompanied by a memorial ceremony in honour of Dr. Milada Horáková and all political prisoners during which a wreath was laid at a memorial to the victims of Communism. In November, the sixth annual Month of Film in Schools was held at 728 primary and secondary schools, including its integral part – debates with eye-witnesses, directors and historians. The Stories of Injustice Award was also presented that month. In its second year, the prize was dedicated to the memory of the late Ivan Medek. The student jury considered 23 nominations. There were 51 entries in the traditional year-ending student literary competition on the subject Tomorrow We’re Leaving. Within the framework of the project, OWIS also published the book Myths about the Socialist Era.

ACTIVITIES FOR STUDENTS
One World in Schools Student Film Clubs are a long-term extra-curricular project aimed at secondary school pupils. The students themselves organise screenings of documentary films for their classmates, along with meetings with guests, other accompanying events, and even multiple day school film festivals. Film club coordinators get to take part in regular workshops where they meet counterparts from the Czech Republic and abroad. In 2010, there were 56 active film clubs.

The fourth annual One World in Schools International School of Documentary Film was held last year, with students from the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland, Estonia and Romania learning the basics of documentary film-making under the supervision of film professionals.

Another project aimed at students was Who Else?, the goal of which was to motivate young people to embrace active civic engagement and involvement in public affairs. Within this project, Student Elections 2010 were organized, aimed at familiarising young people with the principles of democracy and the Czech electoral system, as well as sparking a debate on social issues and increasing first-time voter turnout in elections to the Czech lower house of parliament last May. One hundred and thirty-five secondary schools took part in Student Elections 2010. Subsequent research indicated that participation in the real elections by first-time voters who had taken part in the Student Elections was 6% higher than by those who had not. Other activities within the Who Else? project included Our Prague and Our Past public debates. The first brought together secondary school students and candidates from the main political parties standing in local elections in the city. The second was dedicated to the issue of reconciliation with the totalitarian past. 167 students from 52 Prague secondary schools took part in the two meetings.

SCHOOL SCREENINGS DURING THE ONE WORLD INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

During the One World IFF every year, One World in Schools puts on special screenings for primary and secondary school pupils. Every screening is followed by a discussion with a guest, who answers young viewers’ questions regarding the film. During the 12th year of the festival, nearly 48,000 pupils in 30 cities and towns around the Czech Republic attended the screenings.

Additionally, there were 400 entries in the traditional creative competition for young pupil viewers from the category One World for Kids. The competition is organised in conjunction with Czech Television.

ONE WORLD IN SCHOOLS ABROAD

Since 2008, know-how of the programme has successfully been exported beyond the Czech Republic’s borders. Alongside Slovakia, Poland, Estonia, Romania and Lebanon, the programme extended its activities to, Georgia, Bosnia and Kosovo in 2010.

Variants originated under the People in Need banner in 2001 as an educational programme aimed at fostering better relations between the majority of society and minorities living in the Czech Republic. In its early days, the emphasis was on a campaign poking fun at the neo-Nazi movement and racist views and on supporting multicultural education at all levels in the Czech school system, mainly through educational activities for teachers and long-term cooperation with partner schools.

Over the last ten years, the subject of intercultural education has been broadened to take in global development education and an inclusive approach has been increasingly emphasised. Dozens of teaching manuals have been published and thematic courses and seminars have drawn over 12,000 participants, including teachers, state officials, NGO staff and university students.

SCHOOLS FOR EVERYBODY – SCHOOLS FOR ALL

The Variants programme cooperates with several dozen partner schools. As well as supporting the effective teaching of multicultural education, it aims above all to help facilitate the integration of children with special needs into mainstream educational settings. With that end in mind, a survey entitled SON-R Qualitative Analysis Test was carried out in 2010, focusing on the problem of diagnosing such children. One of the few tests regarded as unbiased in the Czech Republic, it is used in case of hard-to-test children, including those who are socially and culturally disadvantaged.

In the middle of the year, two other projects aimed at boosting inclusive education reached a conclusion. The two-year On the Way... project attempted to establish conditions for the sustainable teaching of socially disadvantaged children in the Ústí nad Labem region. Meanwhile, the School for Everybody – School for All project was focused on children in Central Bohemia.

SUPPORTING LITERACY AND READERSHIP

Along with ongoing school reforms, cross-curricular subjects have appeared in the educational arena. Such subjects are believed to help develop the personality of the pupil, particularly in regards to views and values. Experience has demonstrated, however, that incorporating cross-curricular subjects into curricula is not always easy. At the same time, in recent years there has been growing talk of inadequate literacy among Czech school children. For that reason, cross-curricular subjects and literacy have become the bases for the project How to Teach Cross-curricular Themes Effectively in Connection with Literacy and Readership, which five NGOs started to carry out in 2010: Projekt Odyssea, Gemini, Tereza, Critical Thinking, and PIN’s Variants educational programme. Each of those organisations is an expert guarantor of selected cross-curricular subjects, which partner schools help in implementing. Within the project, Variants is responsible for the programme Multicultural Education and Education towards Thinking in European and Global Contexts. Three thousand pupils should experience cross-curricular subjects taught alongside literacy within the two and a half years that the programme runs.

COMMUNITY EDUCATION

Variants workers help schools integrate global development education into their curricula and introduce active teaching methods. In 2010, the Global Action Schools2Communities project continued. Pupils from participating schools are encouraged to develop a responsible approach to the world around them, above all in the areas of environmental sustainability and increasing equality between the global North and the South. The project is based on the conviction that schools form an integral part of the local and global community and can therefore make a significant contribution to solving global issues. It also involves schools in Slovakia, Poland, Austria and Malta.

RESPECT DOESN’T HURT

In 2010, the Respect Doesn’t Hurt project (2010–2013) also did its bit to help bring about intercultural and global development education. It supports students’ ability to openly and critically access new information and to develop skills which will help them become actively engaged in a changing society, particularly in the areas of human rights and equal opportunity.

COMFORTABLE STUDY AT HOME

Along with the above-mentioned Global Action Schools2Communities project, Variants was also involved last year with another project in the global development education field: Our Common World. The latter included Chance for Development, an e-learning course for teachers focused on development cooperation and humanitarian aid.

In recent years, teachers have been ever more interested in distance learning combined with intermittent meetings. The project Multicultural Education Otherwise also employed that e-learning approach, attracting the interest of trainee teachers. It offered practical advice on multicultural education in the classroom using what is called the personality approach.

In 2010, the Migration Awareness Programme maintained its involvement in the three-year European project Let’s create a more diverse media!

MIGRATION AWARENESS PROGRAMME

As part of its information and media programme on migration, PIN focused specifically on working with journalists and keeping them informed through newsletters, suggesting story ideas and through its own media outputs. It also revamped its Web site www.migration4media.net, which serves as the programme’s main information channel.

Last year, the Migration Awareness Programme (MAP) produced and assisted in the production of 70 media outputs in both traditional and electronic media (MF Dnes, iDnes.cz, Lidové noviny, Právo, Hospodářské noviny, E15, Ekonom, Czech Television, Czech Radio, Prague Post, BBC, Falter, etc.).

In April 2010, the Migration Programme issued its own six-page Migration and Media supplement in the Lidové noviny daily. Members of the Migrants’ Forum—an informal group of migrants living in the Czech Republic and interested in media communication founded by the programme the previous year—also contributed to the supplement.

MEDIA TRAINING

The Migrants’ Forum aims to increase the presence of foreign voices in the media and in the public discourse. Its members are mainly foreign students and fresh graduates of Czech universities. In 2010, MAP organised trainings for them, led by experts in journalism, in internet journalism, blogging and radio work. The coordinators of the programme systematically recommend members of the Migrants’ Forum to journalists as sources for news stories on various aspects of foreigners’ lives in the Czech Republic.

At the end of July of last year, the Forum, supported by MAP, launched a multiple-author blog on the newspaper blog site iDnes.cz. The most popular piece, on Vietnamese corner stores, attracted nearly 5,000 readers. In 2010, a Migrants’ Forum page was created on Facebook. With these activities MAP focused its work on direct communication with the public via the internet and made use of the potential of online social networks.

DON’T WAIT FOR THE MEDIA TO NOTICE YOU!

New media and platforms which enable long-distance communication and the creation and dissemination of various media formats were the subject of an international workshop, which the MAP team organised in October 2010. Among the participants were partner NGOs from Spain, Italy, Malta, Hungary and the UK. Information acquired at the workshop served as the basis for an electronic guidebook entitled Don’t Wait for the Media to Notice You! which PIN distributed to over 150 organisations, in Czech and English.

CONSORTIUM

Since 2010, PIN has been an active member of the Consortium of NGOs Working with Migrants in the Czech Republic. The consortium coordinates the efforts of member organisations in defending the rights of migrants, issues position papers on migration and integration policy and attempts to make the topic part of the public debate, not just a subject for experts in the field.

DEVELOPMENT AWARENESS PROGRAMME

The aim of the development awareness department is to raise awareness of the Czech public, government officials and media about development cooperation and global problems. The main information channel is the regularly updated development awareness website www.rozvojovka.cz designed to inform the general public and experts. During 2010, PIN contributed to the production of more than fifty articles and reports on development issues. An international conference, ”The poorest Countries – Do We Care? Visegrad 4 countries as re-emerging donors” took place in the fall in cooperation with Forum 2000.

During 2010, PIN also supported the trips of two journalists to developing countries, namely Cote d’Ivoire, Cameroon, Ghana and Burma. Three media supplements were published in two major Czech dailies Lidové noviny and Mladá Fronta Dnes as a result.

TO ACT YOU HAVE TO KNOW

2010 was the final year of a three year project ”To Act You Have to Know” implemented together with partners from Poland, Hungary, Slovakia and the Netherlands. Project, founded by EC aimed at rising of the interest of decision makers, media and students on development issues and cooperation. In 2010 a student competition for the best thesis paper and video clip on development issues took place. Video clips could be seen on TV screens in Prague metro stations and two media supplements were published – Football as a Chance in Mladá Fronta Dnes and Tourism in Developing Countries in Econom. A quarterly issued bulletin Rozvojovka was regularly published and distributed to decision makers, experts and the general public. Three policy makers took part in a study trip to Ethiopia. Students had chance to take part in student seminars or to find out more information about developing countries at a number of summer festivals. Czech journalist Petr Štefan from internet portal Idnes.cz (online version of Mladá Fronta Dnes) visited Burma that is still recovering after the Nargis cyclone and published numerous articles and interviews.

THE PRICE OF WATER

In 2010 a new development awareness campaign started. The Price of Water which is designed to inform the Czech public about water and sanitation problems in developing countries, particularly through media and public events. Over fifty articles were published in printed media, online or on radio programmes. One media supplement about water and sanitation was published in the major Czech daily Mladá Fronta Dnes. The public had a chance to see an outdoor exhibition ”The Price of Water” showing scenes from Afghanistan in three places in Prague, as well as in Olomouc. Czech reporter Tomáš Nídr visited West Africa with support of the campaign and published five articles about water and sanitation issues. The public was able to receive more information about water and sanitation problems through leaflets, brochures, T-shirts or stickers at various summer festivals, exhibition openings and seminars.

One of the Social Integration Programme’s key activities is working with pre-school age children.

SOCIAL INTEGRATION PROGRAMMES
The number of people who find themselves trapped by social exclusion continues to rise. One result of this situation is the increasing number of socially excluded areas that we find in almost every city in the Czech Republic. Workers in the Social Integration Programmes (SIP) provide qualified social services in these areas. Their mission is to halt the social decline of their clients and motivate them to take active steps to improve their lot.

SIP staff help individual clients exercise their rights and provide them with support in dealing with their problems. All the steps they take while providing services are carried out with clients’ knowledge. SIP are most frequently involved in the areas of unemployment, housing, debt and education.

ACTIVITIES OF SOCIAL INTEGRATION PROGRAMMES

The key activity of SIP is providing specialised help to individuals and families in the field. Special emphasis is placed on children and their education. Trained volunteers carry out individual tutoring in homes, working to improve results, not only with children but also with their parents. Starting to work with children after they have enrolled at primary school is too late. The sooner a child receives quality teaching support, the greater his or her chance of success is at school.

For this very reason, SIP focus on working with pre-school-age children. Pre-school clubs and mothers’ clubs were opened in nine cities and towns in the Czech Republic in 2010.

Within an individual tutoring programme, trained volunteers teach at family homes, working on improving school results, not only with children but also with their parents.”

Children aged three and older receive quality care aimed at eliminating the obstacles that can lead to reduced prospects or other problems at school later. Several learning deficiencies can arise from living in a socially disadvantaged environment, including inadequate Czech language levels and insufficient socialisation skills.

At the end of 2010, SIP workers held a seminar on conceptual teaching where the Norwegian teaching method Grunnlaget was presented in the Czech Republic for the first time. This method, which in simple terms teaches children how to learn, is used in most Norwegian kindergartens and primary schools. It has been incorporated into the activities of pre-school clubs.

Another important pillar of SIP work is career advice. This includes services aimed at making it easier for clients to apply themselves on the job market. Careers advisors motivate pupils and students to complete their studies in order to boost their chances on

In 2010, Social Integration Programmes were active in over 60 cities and towns in eight regions around the Czech Republic. The team of 180 people included field social workers, advisors, educational workers and coordinators. A huge amount of gratitude is also due to all of the volunteers, whose energy and enthusiasm contributes so much to the work of the SIPs. In 2010, there were over 280 volunteers, mainly active in the field of education. Employees and volunteers are listed by name at the end of the annual report.

FIELD SOCIAL WORK
Field social work is a registered social service aimed at minimising the risks that arise in life on the margins of society. SIP staff provide clients with help in exercising their rights while at the same time contributing to the fulfilment of their duties and responsibilities towards society. The work is carried out with the consent and cooperation of clients in such a way as to help them become capable of resolving similar problems for themselves in the future.

The main tasks of field social workers include acting as an intermediary in dealings with institutions, supporting families coping with difficult situations and motivating clients in general. In a complex environment, workers are an element of social support and control; they can increase clients’ social mobility and skills, or mediate with other social services. Services do not include financial or material help.

SOCIAL ACTIVATION SERVICES FOR FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN
Those who have lived in social exclusion for a long time usually meet with other, linked problems that impact upon their families and children as well as themselves. Social Activation Services for Families with Children, which is a supplement to field social work, arose as a direct response to the need for a thorough solution.

This service involves the free provision of necessary support for families who have been living long-term in conditions that directly endanger the healthy development of their children. SIP workers mainly work to support families faced with the prospect of their children being taken into institutional care. The aim is to create a family atmosphere which will gradually allow the overall development of these children.

The service is built on the principle that the well-being of children comes first. It also aims to boost the social skills of individual family members, encouraging the creation of adequate conditions for school work and keeping children in school until they graduate.

EMPLOYMENT AND CAREER COUNSELLING
The aim of the advisory services is to support clients who are attempting to find a place on the open jobs market. Finding long-term employment is, of course, a basic condition for restarting a successful life on the part of individuals or even whole families. Work advisors help adult clients orient themselves on the labour market, give them legal advice in this area, and try to increase their qualifications. If long-term positions are unavailable, clients receive help in finding short-term jobs, or work within the framework of public or community services. Staff also offer assistance in dealing with some of the negative impacts of long-term joblessness, such as low self-esteem and indebtedness. Advisors often mediate between debtors and creditors, reaching agreement on a payment calendar and overseeing the repayments.

Career advisory services are focused mainly on children at primary and secondary schools. The aim is to show these teenage clients the different life prospects of those who are in and out of work. Career advisors motivate clients to attain the kind of education that will enable them to assert themselves on the labour market as adults. They also help them to choose a suitable school and fill in enrolment forms. All of these advisory services are carried out alongside the other services provided, allowing for complex support of the client and their family.
SUPPORTING EDUCATION
Low educational attainment is one of the most common causes of social exclusion. As well as improving one’s chances of succeeding in the labour market, level of education is also closely linked to other social skills. That is why emphasising the importance of education is a basic tenet of the Social Integration Programmes.

Social Integration Programmes’ teaching work involves both school-age and pre-school children. The focus of pre-school clubs and mothers’ Clubs is on the youngest children, while individual tutoring, which takes place in the home, is targeted at those who have already begun attending school. The latter work is carried out by university student volunteers who help children with their homework, serve as a go-between for the family and the school, and encourage parents to create adequate conditions for children to do their school work.

PRE-SCHOOL CLUBS
Following a successful pilot project in Bílina, where pre-school clubs have been running since 2005, such facilities were opened at nine places around the Czech Republic by 2010.

The mission of Social Integration Programmes is to raise children’s knowledge levels and social skills even before they start to attend school regularly.

The clubs hold presentations on different professions or hold lectures on that topic. They are open two days a week: one day focuses on educational activities while the second is devoted to advisory services, sharing experiences, resolving practical issues, and individual work with clients.

MOTHERS’ CLUBS
Mothers’ clubs are aimed at influencing the entire family environment and are run alongside pre-school preparation in most areas. Mothers are encouraged to support their children’s education, while the clubs become places where they can obtain information, share their problems and discuss issues related to bringing up their children. The women are directly involved in decorating the clubs and planning their activities.

The goal of this service is to develop mothers’ parenting skills and above all to help them realise the necessity of pre-school education and the advantages of studying from a long-term perspective.
SOCIAL INTEGRATION PROGRAMMES

FREE TIME ACTIVITIES
Unlike their peers, children from socially disadvantaged families have to overcome a slew of adverse circumstances, that are not just related to education and school.

For this reason, in addition to the aforementioned tutoring, work with young clients also involves free time activities aimed at eliminating the negative influences of life in socially excluded localities, such as gambling, crime, drug addiction and prostitution.

Drop-in centres in Bílina and Ústí nad Labem help children develop skills and knowledge they will use both in school and in ordinary life. Workers prepare regular activities, weekend trips and summer camps for children. They also offer mothers with children morning sessions for pre-school-age kids. Individual activities are carried out by volunteers, most of whom are university students, while SIP workers provide expert support, organising the centres and co-ordinating services.

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES AND SYSTEMIC CHANGES
Among the key activities of Social Integration Programmes are research and analysis, the results of which are used by SIP staff to promote systemic changes. In 2010, a project entitled NAPSI Together! was completed. In the document, PIN experts and other partner organisations set out their alternative to the EU’s National Action Plan for Social Integration (NAPSI) with the aim of helping it fulfil its function completely. The project’s greatest added value was a participative approach that saw all subjects involved in the issue of social inclusion play a role in its creation: state officials, NGOs and people actually living in social exclusion. Therefore, April 2010 saw the first national meeting of people with experience of poverty and social exclusion. At the event, information was acquired from people who were experiencing, or had experienced, social exclusion.

In 2010, SIP workers also monitored the conditions in which consumer loans are granted. As well as putting together an Index of Predatory Lending, which compares contractual conditions among lenders outside the banking sector, SIP staff focused on regulation of the use of clause arbitration. In conjunction with the Czech Banking Association, they succeeded in putting a stop to its use at all banks in the Czech Republic.

OTHER ACTIVITIES
In November, People in Need held a seminar on conceptual teaching at which SIP teaching workers learned about the Grunnlaget teaching method used in most kindergartens and primary schools in Norway. Regional branches were also involved in taking the One World film festival around the country.

A project entitled Assistance in Court Hearings was held in Plzeň, focusing on mediating between the police and inhabitants of socially excluded localities. Staff at the Chomutov branch heard directly from young people about their experience of living in a socially excluded environment. Using cameras and questionnaires they are trying to encourage the inhabitants of such areas to become directly involved in dealing with the issues that affect them.

“Individual activities are mainly carried out by volunteers, most of them university students.”

Four participants at the first national meeting of people with experience of poverty and social exclusion were selected to represent the Czech Republic at a Europe-wide forum.

SOCIAL INTEGRATION PROGRAMMES – SLOVAKIA

PIN’s Social Integration Programmes also provides services in Slovakia. Workers have been engaged in specialised social programmes there since 2004, primarily in the east of the country. As in the Czech Republic, the mission is to introduce new forms of social inclusion. In addition to carrying out classic field work, Social Integration Programmes workers also helped deal with the aftermath of flooding which hit the whole country in August. In 2010, the Social Integration Programmes had fifteen employees in Slovakia and 50 volunteers.

COMMUNITY CENTRES

People in Need community centres provide social services aimed at a comprehensive solution to the serious problems experienced by clients and their families. In 2010, such centres were in operation in Petrovany, Roškovce and Sveržov.

Alongside services, Social Integration Programmes workers provide clients with necessary and otherwise inaccessible information. Their tasks also include cooperating with state bodies, local authorities and non-profits, who work together to administer social inclusion policies. In 2010, for instance, Social Integration Programmes workers took part in the creation of Complex Local Strategies in all the locations in which they operated.

SUPPORTING EDUCATION

In Slovakia, the aim is also to keep children at regular primary schools and to do away with the reasons they are sent to so-called special schools. Teaching workers, in cooperation with volunteers, to provide children with tutoring and to try to motivate their parents to create the conditions in which the children can do school work.

In year 2010, in addition to direct field work, Social Integration Programmes organised seminars at which teachers were introduced to the basics of an inclusive approach to educating children from socially excluded backgrounds. This also involves helping schools reintegrate such children into mainstream educational settings.

Drop-in clubs at which Social Integration Programmes workers focus on education and boosting the social skills of kids from socially excluded backgrounds are an independent service.

EMPLOYMENT AND CAREER COUNSELLING

Services are divided into work/legal advice and career advice. The former offers support to people preparing to start a job, including the administration, mediating the actual position, and assistance in communication with employers.

The essence of career counselling is to support primary and secondary school pupils as they take decisions regarding their future. In group and individual sessions, advisors offer various perspectives on their futures as adults and show them the likely results of their choices.

Social Integration Programmes workers teach their clients to find alternative paths and plan a life strategy. The service also includes preparing the pupil and their families for secondary school entrance exams, including financial support in the form of a grant.
PIN’s Club of Friends had over 7,000 members at the end of 2010. Most members contribute either 8 or 12 EUR monthly. Half of the funds raised is used for humanitarian assistance. One quarter is used to assist political prisoners, support human rights and democracy assistance in totalitarian regimes. The last quarter goes towards covering organisational running costs, member services and the recruitment of new supporters.

HUMANITARIAN OPERATIONS

In January 2010, PIN used money from the Club of Friends’ Rapid Response Fund to provide immediate assistance to survivors of the earthquake in Haiti. In the first few weeks, financial support from the Czech Republic helped secure drinking water, tent distribution and food aid. A Czech medical team assisted over 2,000 people. Following the end of the war between the Tamil Tigers and the Sri Lankan government, PIN started to assist IDPs returning to their destroyed villages. Over 600 families received assistance to help them start up their destroyed farms. In April, the western Chinese province of Qinghai was struck by a devastating earthquake. Money from Czech donors helped to purchase food, winter tents, beds, blankets and other materials needed to survive in the tough conditions of the Tibetan Plateau.

To assist farmers, PIN created an irrigation system in drought-stricken Ethiopia, distributed farming tools and corn seed. Strong monsoon winds and subsequent flooding hit around a third of the territory of Pakistan at the end of July. PIN immediately sent coordinators who organized the distribution of food, tents, tarpaulins and drinking water for tens of thousands of people. The initial aid was paid by the Club of Friends.

PIN continued its operations in the unstable South Kivu province of the Democratic Republic of Congo where PIN concentrates on improving care at village medical centres, ensuring sources of drinking water, and providing education for IDPs’ children. In eastern Burma, the site of the world’s longest running civil war, PIN supported the activities of various medical organisations.

HUMAN RIGHTS

Couriers from the Czech Republic delivered to Cuba medicines, vitamins and small financial gifts to 86 political prisoners and their families. Forty-five persecuted independent journalists also received support, as did 26 projects organised by civic activists. In Belarus, PIN concentrated on helping unjustly persecuted activists and the families of students expelled from their schools. After the brutal repression of demonstrations in December, activists who had been detained received help from the Club of Friends. The regime in Burma brutally represses every movement towards democracy and still keeps thousand of political prisoners behind the bars. In this country, PIN supported financially and materially 58 political prisoners and their families, as well as those activists who have not yet been arrested. If the idea of human solidarity is important to you, become a member of the club (www.peopleinneed.cz/club)!

People in Need would like to thank all current members for their continuing support!
